Life After ACA – Here we go again!

The recently introduced American Health Care Act (AHCA) primarily rolls back Medicaid funding, a number of taxes and penalties. It also substitutes refundable tax credits for the current marketplace premium subsidies. This is the first (repeal) phase of a three-phase approach. The Act is narrow in its focus so it can be passed with a simple majority vote by the House and Senate. Legislation to address other issues, including lowering costs, will come in the future but will need cooperation from Republicans and Democrats. The Act is already running into trouble with certain Republicans and the Democrats appear to be solidly united against it so it is a good bet that final legislation will look different than what is being proposed. A lot will be happening to the next few weeks and you will hear the latest updates, along with a discussion of potential impacts to your practices.
